

Station 15 – Old registry office

Built in 1767, the old registry office was the district office and the home of the bailiffs of the Sickingen to Sickingen reign family. The earnings from the area of reign got claimed and administered there.

After the end of the reign of Sickingen to Sickingen, the old registry office was converted to a home and had partially three owners.

In part of the remediation of the historic city, from 2002 to 2005, the landmarked building with two-floored central part of the building, curb roof and lateral corner pilasters, were expensively and from the ground up renovated. On the top floor, it accommodates the pension office, the cemetery administration and the registry office of the administration of association of municipalities Landstuhl and so it became the administration building again.

After the renovation and the remediation, the overall impression and the historic preservation viewpoint stayed.

The lavishly enlarged wedding hall is behind the former arched gateway and below is a rustic sandstone vaulted cellar, suitable for events.

Both crests with the year 1767 above the entrance portal remind of the Sickingen to Sickingen reign family and of the one from Hacke.
